Prison of Rules: Transitioning to Semitised post-democracy

Diversity Macht Frei

The age we're living in is one in which we transition from democracy to bureaucracy. The essence of bureaucracy is rules; static; superficially inflexible; but vulnerable to covert manipulation. The essence of democracy is judgement; dynamic; adaptable; continuously refined.

Just as many European states are nominal monarchies where the monarch has been deprived of any real power, the new techno-bureaucracies will preserve the external forms of democracy.

More and more, bureaucracy is encroaching on the democratic space; the culture of rules-following limiting the scope for political choice.

Here, in the absurd "Boris and the Burkas" saga, we see an unelected bureaucrat, part of the state apparatus, presuming to tell an elected politician what he is allowed to say.

The equalities watchdog has branded Boris Johnson's comments on the burqa "inflammatory and divisive", but said it has no powers to launch an investigation.

The Equality and Human Rights Commission (EHRC) said it had received a complaint from a member of the public about Johnson's controversial article in the Daily Telegraph, but its remit extended to breaches of equality law, such as the denial of a service on the grounds of race or religion.

Rebecca Hilsenrath, the commission's chief executive, said: "Boris Johnson's use of language in this instance, which risks dehumanising and vilifying Muslim women, is inflammatory and divisive. Political figures should lead by example, conducting debates in a responsible manner, and language such as this can inhibit legitimate dialogue."

It should come as no surprise that Ms. Hilsenrath is Jewish.

Learning about the challenges faced by people from different parts of society

Personally, I had four sons in five years so I took a career break, came back and worked flexibly, built my career back up and then I started fostering, so I have a foster daughter as well. All these things have taught me a lot about the various challenges that face people from different parts of society, in addition to the fact that I'm Jewish and my faith is very important to me.

Rebecca Hilsenrath is chief executive of the Equality and Human Rights Commission, having previously been their chief legal officer. Before this she was chief executive of legal charity, LawWorks, and prior to this she was a legal adviser in the Treasury Solicitor's Department. Rebecca studied law at the University of Cambridge.

If bureaucracy is government by rules, Jews are the rules-mongers and rules-manipulators par excellence.

Their entire religion is just the endless elaboration and interpretation of a fixed set of rules, whose authority is presumed to be divine. Through the basic mechanism - (Impressive understanding and exposition of Torah and Talmud rules) > (Successful Rabbi) > Prestige > (Marry Rich Merchant's Daughter) > Wealth > (Lots of Children) - the more intelligent Jews have literally been genetically selected for their skill in the artful manipulation of rules.

And this is how the Jews still operate in the present day. They will get the Goyim to agree to a set of rules, invest the rules with sacred authority, and then manipulate the interpretation of those rules to advance their agenda.

Rule Number One for anyone confronting Jewish power should be: Never Agree to a Rule or a Set of Rules that the Jews Try to Get you to Agree To. This was the mistake that Jeremy Corbyn made in trying to fend off the Jews who were scheming against him. In an attempt to appease them, he agreed to adopt the ~~Working Definition of Anti-Semitism~~ Working Definition of What The Goyim Are Allowed to Say. For the foreseeable future, Jews will be using it to take out their critics.

Jews always aim to create a situation in which the use of ordinary human judgement is suspended and the application of rules is enforced. We need to push in the opposite direction. Escape from the prison of Semitic rules and their corruptible enforcers.
